

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A treatment for primary glaucoma caused by spasming of the meridional fibers resulting from presbyopia, including resection of the meridional fibers. The resection is preferably performed in front of the ora serrata, through the sclera, and between the places of attachment of the rectus muscles. The resection is preferably performed as a series of regularly spaced cuts in two parallel lines. Use of a surgical knife with a diamond blade is preferred.